Captain Kean's Secret by T. C. Badcock

Culled from the personal diaries of Jessie Lewis, Captain Kean's Secret is the history of a family embroiled in one of St. John's best-known class struggles of the twentieth century—the bitter conflict between the fish merchants and the working class—and the true story of a young girl who recorded it all, including her own shocking revelation, which lies intertwined with the fate of one of Newfoundland and Labrador's most famous sealing captains.

In Sea Folk, Jim Wellman recounts the stories of twenty-three men and women who make their living from the sea and introduces the reader to some of the most courageous and creative gamblers from Atlantic Canada. A departure from Wellman's critically acclaimed Final Voyages series, this book explores the lives and livelihoods of people who prosecute the fishery both on shore and off. Originally published as human interest stories in the Navigator magazine—the voice of the marine industry in Atlantic Canada—these biographies now appear for the first time in book form.

The Gale of 1929 by Gary Collins

On the heels of a stock market crash in 1929 that left many Newfoundland fishermen and their families destitute in the face of falling cod prices, a hurricane ravaged the shores of the province and wreaked destruction on many of the fishing schooners that plied its waters. As many as ten schooners were caught in this vicious storm, and master storyteller Gary Collins tells the tale of each one and the fate of its crew. Included is the amazing story of the Neptune II from Bonavista North, whose passengers were set adrift in the teeth of that famous gale for forty-eight days!

The White Fleet by J. P. Andrieux

Portuguese interest in Newfoundland dates from as early as 1500–1502, when Gaspar Corte-Reals explored the region, and soon Portuguese fishermen were fishing on the Grand Banks. By the end of World War II, the fleet from Portugal had expanded to about seventy or eighty vessels, recognizable by their white hulls (thus painted to distinguish them as Portuguese and neutral). From May to October each year, the ships of the “White Fleet” were welcome visitors to the port of St. John’s. The White Fleet by J. P. Andrieux is a pictorial history of the centuries-long relationship between the Newfoundland and Portuguese fisheries.

Facing the Sea: Lightkeepers and Their Families

by Harold Chubbs and Wade Kearley

Facing the Sea is a collection of stories that capture and preserve an important era in the maritime history of Newfoundland and Labrador. These tales of rescue and tragedy, of love lost and redeemed, describe firsthand what life was like for the lightkeepers and their families in twenty-five light stations along the exposed and often inhospitable coast of Newfoundland. Collected and recorded by Harold Chubbs and Wade Kearley, these stories are rich with fascinating details and captivating insights, and most are appearing here in print for the first time.

Faithful and Fearless: A History of the St. John's Fire Department

Outlining the equipment used and the firefighting methods employed from the seventeenth century to present day, the book also introduces the reader to the many firefighters who have worked to keep the city safe. ## Newfoundland Drugstores: A History by John K. Crellin

Although primarily associated with filling doctors' prescriptions and selling medicines and other items for self-care, historically drugstores have also been operated as general stores, selling an intriguing range of toiletries, perfumery, confectionery, seeds for the garden, and household items. For many years, the shopping experiences of customers owed a good deal to the distinctive drugstore aura created by a store's elegant wooden fixtures, rows of attractive glass containers, and a characteristic aroma arising from drugs and the preparations compounded on the premises. Newfoundland Drugstores by John K. Crellin is a fascinating account of the important and varied roles that drugstores played in Newfoundland society.
